ARRAIGNMENT OF M'KINLEY

General Finley, of Ohio. Deals in Some Plain Facts.

THE M'KINLEY FAILURE

After Discussing the Breacher National Issues, the Speaker Takes Up McKinley's Debit in 1893 and Points Out How They Were Handled by Herrick, Hanna, Day and Kohlsaat.

On Thursday night General E. B. Finley, of Ohio, delivered the following speech at the Chicago mass meeting:

"We are told that we must not criticize the policy of President McKinley's so-called Philippine war, and to do so is a species of disloyalty to the flag—a giving aid and comfort to the enemy."

"Some of the administration papers go so far as to make our acquiescence in the policy of President McKinley touching the Philippine question, the test of loyalty and denounce as traitors those who dare to question the right of President McKinley to carry on a war, as they put it, to suppress the rebellion of Aguinaldo and his followers."

"No one can truthfully say that the sympathy of every American does not extend to our brave and loyal soldiers and sailors, who, by direction of their commander-in-chief, President McKinley, are heroically shedding their blood for a policy which they as obedient soldiers and sailors have no right to question."

"We are all of one mind on that subject; but if the test of loyalty to the flag is to be measured by loyalty to President McKinley's Philippine policy, I predict, that long before the next Presidential election, the truly loyal element in this country will be found to be in a hopeless minority."

PERSISTENT CONUNDRUMS.

"The people at the risk of being called traitors are making some very pertinent conundrums as to what the war is about; who it was that declared war against the Philippines; and why we are sacrificing the lives of our soldiers and sailors, and spending, as it is said, one million dollars per day in so-called war against a mixed race of people whose country we have neither the right nor the inclination to forcibly annex and make part of the United States, and whom we, under no circumstances, would admit to citizenship with equal rights and privileges of the citizens of this country."

"They are saying, 'the power to declare war belongs to Congress, and that Congress has not declared war against the Philippines.' When it is answered that Aguinaldo and his followers are in rebellion, or have raised an insurrection against the United States they reply, 'that rebellion against a government implies the right of the nation or government rebelled against, to control, govern, and make laws for the rebels; and they very pertinently inquire, 'when, and how President McKinley's administration acquired that right?' If the reply is that his administration bought the right from Spain, they answer that Spain, by its treaty with us, attempted to sell what she did not own; that Aguinaldo and his countrymen were at the time successfully resisting the attempt of Spain to acquire dominion over the Philippine Islands, and that Spain could not sell nor McKinley's administration buy either the Philippine government or its people; and that the resistance of Aguinaldo and the Philippines to the demand of President McKinley's administration for submission to his military government, can in no sense be called either a rebellion or insurrection against the United States."

FREE SPEECH ASSERTED.

"Our candidate for President, Mr. Bryan, together with the Democratic party, is bitterly assailed by administration organs for daring to criticize President McKinley's Philippine policy. These organs point with pride to the present commercial prosperity as a complete vindication of the argument advanced in 1896, that the safety, prosperity and general welfare of the country, depended upon the maintenance of the single gold standard, which, they say, is illustrated and proven by the abundance of sound currency and great activity of all branches of business and trade under Mr. McKinley's administration."

"Present conditions are not attributable to the policy of President McKinley, but to the policy of President McKinley's administration, which, in 1896, was a policy of sound currency and great activity of all branches of business and trade under Mr. McKinley's administration."

THE FIRM OF SALSBERY & GOODMAN having dissolved co-partnership, I, J. H. SALSBERY, do hereby announce that the interest of M. SALSBERY, will continue in the same and will be pleased to serve the public generally with one of the best selected stocks of Furniture on easy installment plans or for cash.

All persons in debt to said firm will settle same with I, HARRY GOODMAN, No. 703 Liberty street, near corner of Eighth.

him on account of the matter of which I have spoken."

At the time I read Mr. Foster's interview, I saw it broadly stated in an editorial of the Verdict, published in New York, of which Mr. O. H. P. Belmont is president, and Alfred Henry Lewis is editor, that the obligations of Mr. McKinley, amounting to $23,000, were not simply endorsements for a friend, but consisted mainly of partnership debts, contracted by one Walker, of the firm of Walker & McKinley, and consisted of promissory notes negotiated by Walker, some of which were signed by Mr. McKinley, and by some twenty small banks in half a dozen counties in northern Ohio; that a sheriff levied on one of Walker's concerns, which forced that card-board structure into a corner, and he failed and made an assignment, which brought matters to a crisis, and which I claim on the part of the banks for their money; that thereupon Mark Hanna, Day, Kohlsaat and Myron T. Herrick, set about to help Mr. McKinley out of the hole by passing around the hat raising money. I quote the following from that editorial:

A QUARTETTE.

"Herrick, Hanna, Day and Kohlsaat, scraped, coaxed, begged, squeezed, and made an assignment, which brought matters to a crisis, and which I claim on the part of the banks for their money; that thereupon Mark Hanna, Day, Kohlsaat and Myron T. Herrick, set about to help Mr. McKinley out of the hole by passing around the hat raising money. I quote the following from that editorial:

PRESENT CONDITIONS.

"Present conditions are due in part to the demands of war which stimulates trade and furnishes employment for idle capital and idle labor, but chiefly to the increased supply of gold and silver."

"We contended in 1896 that the increase of metallic currency, which would result from the opening of the mints to the coinage of silver, would be a blessing to the country, and that it would stimulate business and reduce the purchasing power of the dollar and enhance the value of labor and commodities. While not denying the general proposition, our friends, the enemy, insisted that the result of such conditions would be calamitous, especially to the poor man."

LIMITED PROSPERITY.

"Limited prosperity has come to us with the results predicted by us through the increase of the precious metals, though the increase has been principally in gold instead of silver."

"The friends of President McKinley's administration are rejoicing over the rise of prices and general activity in business, and if this condition results in part from the cause which I have mentioned, I am unable to understand the philosophy that would make the rise of prices arising from an increase of gold a blessing, but a curse if arising from an increase of gold and silver combined."

THE INCREASE OF GOLD.

"There can be no question about the great increase of gold since 1896. I object if stated by reliable authorities, if I may be permitted, quoted from the report of the Director of the Mint, that each year since 1896 there has been an increase in the output of gold amounting to fifty million dollars over the year before. That this year there will be taken from the earth 150 million more than in 1896. Next year will be 1896 by 200 millions. In 1896, a new gold added to the world's supply was 290 millions. This year we will add 340 millions, and if we continue at the same rate, the year 1900 will add 400 millions."

"We all understand that a certain portion of all the gold and silver is used in the arts, and, therefore, not available for coinage purposes. Making due allowance for the gold used in the arts, the world's gold and silver combined available for coinage in 1896 was only about 312 million dollars, while the world's gold for coinage alone each year will be 275 million—only about 37 million short of the total gold and silver available for coinage in 1896; and if the increase continues at the same rate, we will have in 1900 gold alone for coinage purposes amounting to 325 millions; greater by 22 millions than the combined gold and silver available for mintage in 1896. Added to this, over 600 millions of gold has been put within reach of mints, while our government is coinage one million five hundred thousand silver dollars each month, and preparing new mints to coin ten million dollars in gold each month."

CAUSE OF PRESENT CONDITIONS.

"This increase of gold and silver, and not President McKinley's administration, is the prime cause of present conditions, and the money powers of the world before long, will be demanding the demonetization of gold as an unsound currency, and a menace to the poor man's prosperity."

"In Ohio there is Republican revolt (or was, at least, prior to the Republican State Convention) against what is called the Hanna methods, and Hanna bossism in politics, and Hanna's influence at the White House, and openly asserts or claims to assert his influence over the President of the United States. It may be pertinent at this time to recall a bit of political history that has in a manner been forgotten, and which has been revealed to my mind by a published interview of Charles Foster, late Secretary of the Treasury."

HAT PASSED AROUND.

"It will be remembered that in 1893, when Mr. McKinley had been ruined by becoming surety for a friend, and as was indicated by Senator Parker in a recent interview, the hat was passed around amongst the good Republicans and admirers of Mr. McKinley, and the amount raised and the debt paid off."

"A recent reported interview of Governor Foster, he is made to say that Mr. McKinley is the most unreliable man he ever knew, or words to that effect; and speaking of the circumstances of passing around the hat, Mr. Foster, in an interview on the 20th of June last, is reported to have used the following language:

"At the time Mr. McKinley was in trouble, Kohlsaat took an active part in relieving him; against the protest of the politicians of Illinois, he had his brother appointed Judge, and no one could doubt that the appointment was the result of the pressure of Kohlsaat on the President. He was not an other favor from the President on the same ground, and I am sure that he has gained all and more than was due

At the time I read Mr. Foster's interview, I saw it broadly stated in an editorial of the Verdict, published in New York, of which Mr. O. H. P. Mr. W. L. Berkley is conducting one of the largest semi-annual clearing sales ever inaugurated in the city. He has one among the largest and best assortments of furniture, carpets, dining-room sets, stoves, refrigerators and general household outfits from which to select, to be found in the three cities. Long years of experience and ample means has enabled him to select for the most tasty and at the same time keep the prices within the reach of his customers. Now the season has come for marking down his stock to prices, many of them below what he paid at the factory, thereby enabling those who paid full prices to buy the same articles at from one-fourth to one-third less than they did at the first of the season.

MR. MR. H. L. WEST.

There is no season of the year when shoes are not necessary to the comfort of the feet. The thing that most concerns humanity is to secure the best goods for the least money. Then why not buy your shoes from Mr. H. L. West while his special sale is at and below cost, is on and get the greatest bargains for your money?

The season is at hand when he must sell off his summer goods in order to make room for his winter stock and to meet this emergency he is now offering, for the next fifteen days, shoes at prices that have never been offered before in Berkley. He has his shelves full from floor to ceiling and the floor filled, leaving only a small walk way on either side, which gives one an immense stock from which to select. For prices consult his advertisement and to test what he says examine his stock.

MR. T. C. HUMPHRIES.

Mr. T. C. Humphries is conducting a low price sale of shoes, and has already marked his stock down to the lowest prices consistent with honest business methods. He says he is well pleased with the success he has had since he began disposing of his stock, which is by no means exhausted. As you will see by referring to his advertisement, he has a variety of ladies' shoes, in different styles and different prices; children's and misses' sandals, boys' shoes, in all styles; gentlemen's tan or black vic kid or calf dress; workmen's shoes, etc., all of which have been marked at extremely low prices. Call and see if you can find a pair to fit you.

MR. W. B. DAUGHERTY.

A nice late style hat has a great deal to do with making a gentleman appear handsome. Mr. W. B. Daugherty does not stop at keeping as fine a line of hats as may be found in the three cities, but has an extensive line of gentlemen's and ladies' wearing apparel as well. For lack of space we cannot enumerate his stock, but if you need anything to wear all you have to do is to go in and call for it and you will be supplied. He will begin disposing of his large stock to make room for autumn and winter goods, and having a larger stock than he has ever carried before, he will of necessity have to make a greater sacrifice in order to dispose of it. Of course, the buyer gets the benefit. He is going to make room for a stock of men's clothing. See ad for prices.
